

Features

- Internet Resources

1995 marked the year that CTAA -- along with millions of other people -- got on the Internet. A major weekly news magazine has proclaimed 1995 the Year of the Internet and the talk about it shows no signs of slowing down. Despite the fact that, by some estimates, only 10 percent of American households are hooked up and it still costs a good chunk of change to get on-line, the Internet seems to be on the cusp of becoming a method of communication as revolutionary as the telephone.