

COVID-19 Recovery Vendor List for Public Transportation

A joint publication of the American Public Transportation Association (APTA) and Community Transportation Association of America (CTAA)

April 27, 2022 – Update

Overview

The Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) public health emergency has significantly impacted public transportation operations throughout the Nation. As communities recover from COVID-19, transit agencies are implementing new and enhanced measures to ensure the safety of their employees and passengers and increase public confidence in transit, including enhanced cleaning and disinfection, personal protective equipment (PPE) and face coverings, and social distancing.

The American Public Transportation Association (APTA) and the Community Transportation Association of America (CTAA) are committed to helping the U.S. public transportation industry recover and become even stronger than before. The COVID-19 Vendor List for Transit includes information on vendors and products that transit agencies may use in their COVID-19 response and recovery efforts.

This Vendor List is provided to align with Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), local, and state governmental recommendations and requirements for reducing the risks to passengers and employees related to COVID-19 and is not provided as an endorsement of a particular product or vendor by APTA or CTAA. Vendors may be removed from the list based on complaints or concerns raised by APTA and CTAA members.

Updates to this list will be posted monthly.

Barriers, Shields, and Protective Guards

In response to recommendations from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), transit agencies are using physical barriers, such as acrylic protection shields, polycarbonate protection guards, vinyl strip curtains, and other impermeable dividers or partitions, to enforce physical distance and protect employees who come into contact with passengers or other employees.

Contactless Payment Systems

Transit agencies are innovating contactless payment options, with potential safety benefits including fewer physical touchpoints when making payments and less exposure to contaminated surfaces. This technology can reduce the amount of personal contact involved in travel through a simpler, cleaner, and quicker payments system. The CDC recommends that transit agencies "use devices that do not require the employee to handle customer credit, debit, or rechargeable ride cards and institute a cashless policy."

Infrared Cameras and Kiosks

Transit agencies are expanding their capabilities to monitor the health and safety of their employees and passengers. Thermal imaging cameras offer one available temperature and health screening method. These cameras identify elevated body temperature, which could be indicative of a fever (one of the symptoms of a viral infection).

While these are not medical devices and do not replace conventional medical testing, they can be used to give an early indication when used properly. Thermal cameras also can be integrated into kiosks which support administration of health screening questionnaires.

Signs, Stickers, and Floor Decals

The CDC recommends that people maintain at least six feet of separation. Physical separation, also known as physical distancing, reduces the risk of airborne transmission of the virus. Signs, stickers and decals help remind transit passengers and employees to maintain physical distance.

Thermometers

Given the scope and severity of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission – the agency tasked with enforcing the Americans with Disabilities Act – has stated that employee temperature checks are valid and appropriate. The CDC also recommends routine temperature checks as an important way to monitor employee health.

Ultraviolet Light and Other Innovative Products

Transit agencies are working with suppliers and researchers to advance sanitizing and disinfection solutions to stop the spread of COVID-19.

Products under development and testing include fixed and mobile ultraviolet light (UV) devices at a range of frequencies across the UV spectrum for air purification and surface sterilization;

antimicrobial biostats that create a protective layer on surfaces and prevent microbes from growing;

electrostatic sprayers that positively charge a disinfecting solution, atomize it, and disperse it in tiny particles across a negatively-charged surface for greater coverage in less time; and air filters that actively capture and kill microbes.

CDC and EPA are reviewing the results of research conducted in the transit industry. Many innovative products, however, have not yet been officially approved or endorsed by CDC or EPA as effective against SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19, though many of these products have laboratory results documenting their effectiveness. Some of these products also may have harmful effects that must be mitigated during application or use.

A transit agency considering innovative products should confirm all laboratory claims of effectiveness against SARS-CoV-2 with vendors, clarify instructions and safety requirements for use or application, and continue to monitor CDC and EPA recommendations.

Some companies claim that their UV products reduce or eliminate virus transmission via surfaces. Because these disinfection devices can be considered pesticide devices, their efficacy claims are not reviewed or verified by EPA. In the absence of third-party assessments, EPA is conducting research to understand which technologies reduce the amount of SARS-CoV-2 on surfaces. EPA's preliminary research did not demonstrate disinfection using UV-C products.
